

Your jargon email to translate

Your turn; translate this email into plain English with AI, then draft a short reply.

The email (verbatim)

FROM: Dana Cole, Green Belt, Contact-Center Handle-Time Project

TO: You (White Belt)

SUBJECT: Q2 numbers ahead of Thursday's tollgate

Hi, ahead of Thursday's tollgate, here are the Q2 numbers for the handle-time project. We are sitting around a 2.8 sigma level (roughly 92,000 DPMO) against the customer CTQ of a sub-six-minute average handle time. The Measure-phase data says the process is not in statistical control: the I-MR chart has a run of nine points below the centerline right after the new IVR menu went live, which reads as a special cause we can actually bank. The Pareto on after-call work shows manual CRM note entry and post-call surveys drive about seventy percent of the non-talk time. Gemba walks suggest takt time on tier-2 escalations is getting blown by hold-and-transfer loops. I would scope the Improve phase around ACW reduction and first-call resolution. Ping me if you want a pre-read before the tollgate.

Do not panic if you do not understand a single word of it. Feeling lost right now is normal, and that is the point.